The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hirata.

In particular, Hirata teaches finding a projected fuel demand in the form of a pump control output and then calculating an estimated fuel pressure. The estimated fuel pressure is used to set the opening time for the injectors (see column 5, lines 43-58). Also, it has been assumed that the substantially constant pressure claimed is meant to be constant at the set CPU pressure. Hirata achieves this same result.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hirata.

In particular, since the pressure within the rail varies with fuel flow, it would have been obvious to size the valve such that its response does not alter the variable output set by the CPU but merely reduces the pressure to avoid over pressures.

Claims 3 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hirata in view of Gaskins.

Hirata applies as noted above and Gaskins teaches the well known practice of using look-up tables to relate input and output data for use in controlling an electric fuel pump for a common rail, thus making such structure obvious to use in Hirata.

Applicant's arguments filed October 20, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In particular, the pressure changes that applicant identifies are indeed changes which are not measured by any pressure sensor (since none exists in the systems), but are based upon on off times for the pump. These times, as well as the previous cycle estimate, are indications of projected engine demand as required by the claims.

With regard to the opening times of the injectors, these times are always a function of the pressure since the fuel amount injected is a function of pressure and opening time.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
